

Revera's Cathie Brow wins Leadership Agency Award for HR Leader of the Year in the 2019 Canadian HR Leadership Awards

MISSISSAUGA, Canada – SEPTEMBER 13, 2019 – Revera Inc., a leading owner, operator and investor in the senior living sector, is very proud to congratulate Cathie Brow, Senior Vice President, Human Resources & Communications, on being recognized with the prestigious Leadership Agency Award for HR Leader of the Year.

This award, announced last night at the Canadian HR Awards gala in Toronto, celebrates not only her transformative contributions to Revera, but her outstanding contributions to the HR profession and her dedication to championing best practices in Canada.

“Since 2008, Cathie has been a strong advocate for forward-thinking people strategies and a well-respected leader and innovator at Revera,” says Thomas G. Wellner, President and CEO of Revera. “We are absolutely delighted that she is in the spotlight nationally through this award, which she so richly deserves.”

“I am passionate about what I do and firmly believe that people are at the heart of every successful business,” says Cathie Brow. “That’s why creating a great place to work is a strong driver for me and the whole HR team at Revera. I am honoured to receive this award, and to share it with my amazing colleagues.”

Cathie joined Revera in 2008, and previously held HR leadership positions in hospitality and health care sectors. She holds a Bachelor of Arts Honours in Economics from York University, a Masters of Industrial Relations from the University of Toronto, and a Certificate in Best Practices in Leadership from Harvard Business School.

The Canadian HR Awards is the biggest awards event of its kind celebrating excellence in the HR profession and recognizing the top employers, HR teams and professionals for their outstanding achievements and best practices. This year's event brought together over 950 attendees for a packed evening hosted by TV personality Jessi Cruickshank.
